IT Training Business Models

Results of CEEdMA Business Survey 2013/2014
(2011 Data: P&L 67%, Cost recovery 8%, Cost Center 15%, depends 10%)

Strategy to Implement Business Model: Objectives & Incentives of P&L Education Teams

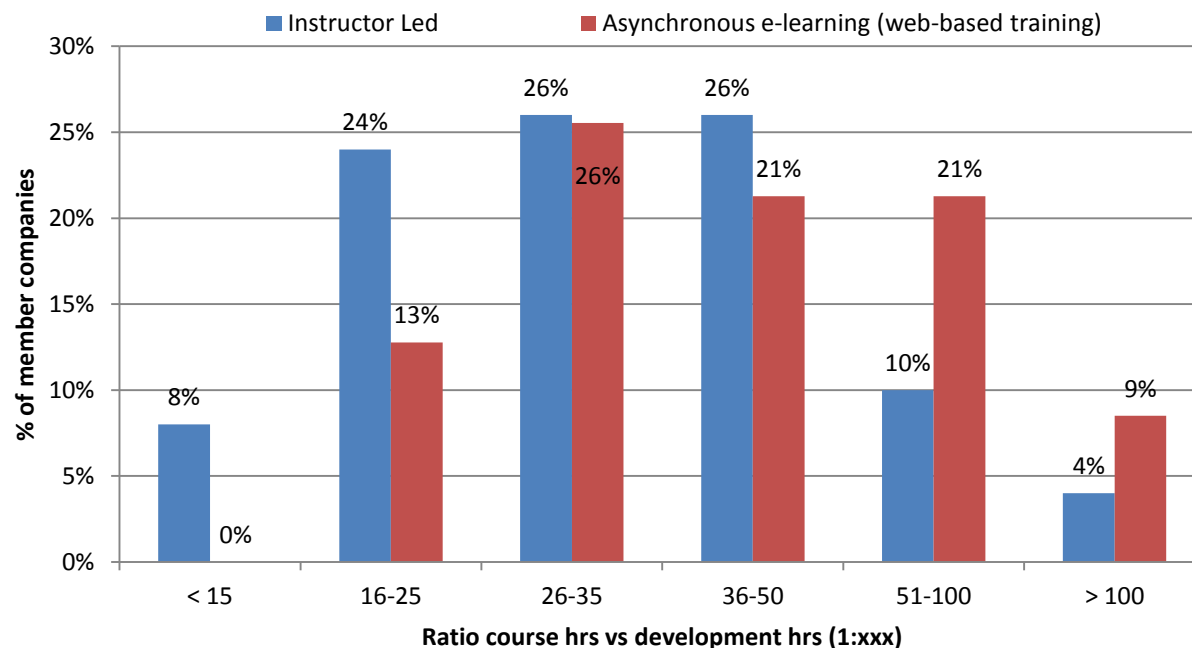

Education Revenue vs Company Revenue in %	Objectives of P&L Education Team		Incentive Plan of P&L Education Team
	Revenue/Margin	Enablement	Revenue/Margin	Enablement
(higher % = more financially successful)
0-3%	50%	50%	77%	23%
>3%	61%	39%	90%	10%

Key Factors to Drive Revenue and Margin

Factor	Revenue	Margin
More products covered by training
Early involvement in product life cycle
Schedule mixed employee, partner, customer courses
Higher # of certified individuals
Provide training to employees and to sales/presales audiences of customers/partners

Example to Measure Efficient Training Operations: Development time

Development time required in person hours for each hour of new class

Example IT training trends over the last six quarters: IT Training Revenue

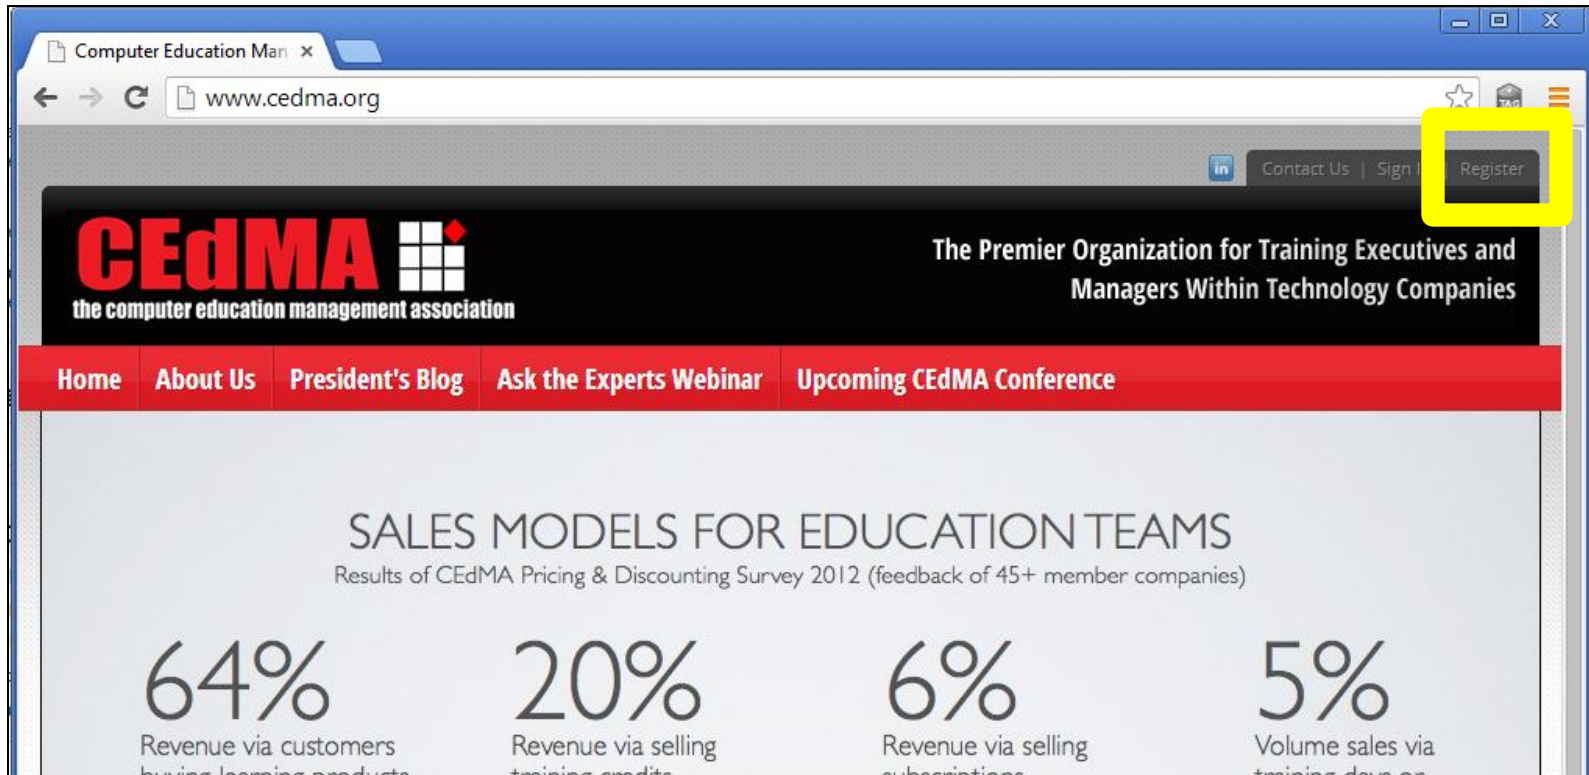

Major Best Practices

- Chose business model depending on how training can add value in your company and make sure you have aligned objectives
- More customer/partner, fewer employees and highly utilized courses drive revenue & margin
- Development ratios for ILT of 20-40 and eLearning of 30-50 are realistic
- Pricing follows the local markets (e.g. salaries) except you have limited competition
- The market is still growing, but slowing down
